Yingkau, March 28.—In the course of the bombardment of Port Arthur March 22 the Japanese dropped more than 200 shells among the Russian war ships lying in the harbor. The Retvizan, Pallada and Bayan again were damaged. The guns in the forts appear to have been outraged by the guns of the Japanese fleet.

The Attack
Tokio, March 28.—According to the Japanese accounts Admiral Togo made another unsuccessful attempt to bottle up Port Arthur yesterday. The account states that our steamers were sunk along the harbor entrance and that later in the day they bombarded Port Arthur for several hours.

Another Attack
Chefoo, March 28.—Yesterday morning the Japanese made another attack, which was apparently unsuccessful, to block the harbor at Port Arthur. The approach was made at 3 a. m. and was favored by a thick mist. Eight torpedo boats conveyed four steamers prepared for sinking in the fairway. The searchlights of the forts disclosed the approach of the flotilla and ships and forts opened fire. The steamers were sunk and the torpedo boats, which attempted to steal into the inner basin where the fleet was at anchor, had a narrow escape in getting back. The Japanese squadron which is composed of sixteen battleships and cruisers, remained well out to sea bombarding the town at long range. At daylight Admiral Makarov's fleet quit the harbor and proceeded some distance to sea, but not leaving the protection of the shore batteries. The Japanese then retired in the direction of the Bionde Islands. There is no doubt that the Russians knew the Japanese intended to make another attempt to block the harbor, particularly in view of the increased activity of Makarov's fleet. As a result the Russians were keeping a sharp outlook.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER

GEORGE GRIFFIN SHOT

Was Killed by Sixteen-Year-Old Charles Condon This Afternoon... Murderer Captured... Young Griffin Was But Thirteen, and Was Murdered While Sweeping the Porch at His Father's Residence, at Two Thirty.

While George Griffin, aged thirteen, and the son of Yardmaster Dave Griffin of the North-Western road, was sweeping the porch in front of his parents' residence this afternoon about half-past two he was shot and killed by John Condon, aged sixteen years. The bullet struck young Griffin in the neck and he died within a few minutes. Condon escaped but later was captured by Officers Brown and Roy Graves near his own home.

The bullet entered the boy's neck and he fell to the porch in a dying faint. Dr. Penber was hastily summoned with the little fellow breathed his last within a short time. Meanwhile Condon had made good his escape, dropping his murderous weapon, a 32-calibre revolver, and his hat in his flight and the two were found near the porch by the police officers who were summoned.

Griffin, the dead boy, was a lovable little fellow and very much devoted to his mother, who is lying at the point of death and it is feared the shock of her son's death will kill her.

Officer John Brown and Turnkey Roy Graves went in pursuit of the young man and found him sitting on a pile of stone in front of his father's residence shortly after three. He seemed dazed and made but little resistance when taken into custody and marched down to the city lock-up.

RUSSIA IS LIKE FRANCE OF 1870

Corruption of High Officials Cripples the Czar's Forces Very Seriously.

The news of the defective mines and ammunition, of shortage of coal and munitions of war, of inferior and worthless commissary stores, which is constantly appearing in the news dispatches reminds one of the conditions in France before the Franco-Prussian war and incidentally the Russian military and naval service is honeycombed with incompetence and what in America would be called "graft." There is no question that the reports, many of them well authenticated, are causing no little concern to the French government as to the ultimate outcome of the war in the far east.

The latest indication of slipshod methods in the Russian army is to the effect that a vast deal of the fixed ammunition in Manchuria will not fit the arms with which the troops are equipped. If this is true it will add largely to the difficulties which confront Gen. Kuropatkin.

A retired United States army officer said yesterday, speaking of the phase of the situation in the far east: "There is a lesson for the United States in this fact that Russia has much ammunition which will not be fit in the United States today a condition exists somewhat similar to this which might have serious results in case of a big war, I allude to the fact that the state troops and regular army are armed with different styles of rifles, the ammunition for which is not interchangeable. In the hurry and bustle of war it might easily happen that troops with one style of piece would be furnished for another and be left without ammunition at a critical time with disastrous consequences. While it is true this probability is remote, it exists and there is no good reason why it should. Why, remember at one time in New York the regular army men were armed with one calibre rifle, the national guardsmen with another, the United States naval men with a third and the naval reserve with a fourth. You can readily see how in the case of a sudden emergency a fatal mixup might easily have occurred."

AN ART GALLERY FOR JANESVILLE

Ladies of Art League Make Beginning, with Handsome $175 Water Color.

Francis Jeannot's beautiful water-color study of a scene in the forest of Fontainebleau, near Paris, one of the Thurber collection that was much admired, will be the first picture to be hung in the art gallery of the public library. It is the intention to have a similar exhibition every year. The School Art Auxiliary purchased a reproduction of a scene in Holland for the schools and several pictures were disposed of to private individuals. Mrs. Fred Capelle secured a handsome water-color "The Birch" from the brush of P. P. Schiedges.

FIGHT QUARLES FOR HIS REPEAL

TIMBER LAW WOULD BE MADE OBSOLETE.

THE DESERT LAW WOULD BE

Made Broader and Better Fitted for the Present Time and Age—Would Create Small Farms.

The fight has been surging in the senate public lands committee during the past week on the question of the repeal of the land laws. Following Senator Hansbrough's unparalleled act of refusing to consider the wishes of the majority to report the bill repealing the three laws, it was decided to split the Quarles bill into two measures, one to repeal the timber act, which could be disposed of first, and the other to take up the desert law and the commutation clause of the homestead law.

Quarles' Bill.
Senator Quarles immediately introduced the timber end of his repeal bill with a provision for the sale of stumpage by the interior department, a measure somewhat similar to Senator Hansbrough's bill introduced last fall except that it contains no reserve, and the location of forest reserves, railroad and other land rights upon "land and subject to homestead entry" under which the lands reserved by the secretary of the interior for irrigation purposes in small tracts of not more than 160 acres could have been located by speculators and syndicates in great blocks of thousands of acres.

Agreed Upon.
This bill was unanimously agreed to in the committee and passed the senate without difficulty. Its repeal has been recommended by the president's commission and it is evidently the hope of the stockmen and the land grabbers that this concession will keep them quiet for at least this session. Senator Quarles, however, announced that he would immediately introduce the other two thirds of his bill providing for the absolute repeal of the desert land act and the commutation clause of the homestead act.

No Report.
The fact that the president's commission has refused to make a definite report on these two laws does not alter the determination to secure their abrogation. The tremendous frauds which have been practiced under them, the impossibility of their administration so that actual settlement becomes necessary, and the official testimony of a long line of commissioners of the general land office and secretaries to proceed upon without any further special investigation at this late day.

Another Fight.
A bitter fight that never is promised against the second division of the Quarles bill. Senator Hansbrough has arrogated to himself the special championship of this opposition, and relying upon the indecisive action of the president's commission regarding these laws every effort will be made to prevent their consideration just as was done with the original Quarles bill.

SPRING PRACTICE FOR FOOTBALL

Coach Curtis Tells the Candidates for the Team Next Fall to Get Out and Practice.

Madison, Wis.—Coach Arthur H. Curtis of the University of Wisconsin football team has issued an order for spring practice to be held in about two weeks, or as soon as the ground is dry enough for out of door work. Captain Irving J. Bush has issued an appeal for all badger students to assist the management in the search for football material. A quiet hunt throughout the state is to be made by the Wisconsin managers for the giants among the young men of the commonwealth for timber out of which Coaches Curtis and Cochems will develop the eleven next fall. It is the big men that the badgers are after. The contemplation of the coaches is to get a team which cannot be played out of wind by the big maroons or Norwegians that always make up the Chicago and Minnesota teams.

It is said here that while Assistant coach Cochems was investigating the records of the athletes of the other universities, which investigation resulted in the compiling of a list of fifty alleged professionals, he came upon a large number of eligible young men of mighty physical power who will be induced if possible to come to the university for football purposes. There is no information that improper inducements will be held out to them. Assistant coach Cochems will have charge of the spring practice. Head coach Curtis will remain in Chicago where he is attending Rush Medical college.

STORY TO GREEDY CHILDREN GIVEN

Chicago Paper Tells How the New Baby Elephants at the Zoo Suffered Because They Were Pigs.

You need not be surprised this morning to find that father has left the morning paper at home for mother, who, even now, as you scowl at your breakfast food, is announcing that she will read you a story if you are good and don't soil the tablecloth, says the Chicago Tribune. Your mother will explain that you must not mistake the story for an Aesop fable, though it sounds a lot like one, right down to the moral at the end. It is a Cy De Vry fable, which makes it a really true fable.

Baby Elephants Attract.
It all happened on the great platform in the middle of the animal house at Lincoln park, where the elephants are quartered. The building was packed with the hundreds of children, and fathers, and mothers, and nurses, who have flocked to the park in the last ten days to see the strange new animals brought from the orient. On the platform stood the Duchess, the old elephant, endorsed these many years to the children, who have fed her tons of peanuts. At the other end of the enclosure were the two baby elephants brought from Singapore.

There was a perceptible estrangement between Duchess and the frisky youngsters. In front of the baby elephants, which the policeman has named Buzz and Fuzz, the children were packed to suffocation, but only the thinnest, straggling line of visitors kept Duchess company, and most of them were eagerly edging closer to the babies.

Coming Attractions.

The Great Barlow Minstrels Elceisor Minstrelsy has been reached in the Great Barlow Minstrel production. Webster's abridged definition of the word "Minstrelsy" is art, or occupation of a minstrel; system of ballads; music; a company of musicians. But the way he should define it now is as follows: Gorgeous magnificence in scenic embellishments; songs that are witty, wise and charming; personal grace with beauty to charm; an amusement exhibition containing all that is novel, great, grand and beautiful.

ILLINOIS TEACHERS ON STRIKE

Dismissal of One for Chastising Pupils Starts Trouble.

Carterville, Ill., March 28.—The teachers of the city schools of Carterville went out on a strike owing to the discharge by the city board of education of one of their number, Miss May Winning. The teacher chastised a pupil and the board ordered her discharge. The effect of this action on the other pupils seemed to be demoralizing to the school, and the teachers refused longer to remain in the school unless Miss Winning be reinstated. This is believed to be one of the first strikes in the teaching ranks since the organization of the teachers into unions.

IOWA MINES MAY SHUT DOWN

Workmen Are Not Inclined to Accept the Ultimatum of Operators.

Des Moines, Ia., March 28.—Prominent Iowa miners discussing the ultimatum delivered by the operators that unless the wage scale in certain districts is arbitrated a general shutdown will follow, are disposed to accept the proposition. Others less conservative are inclined to permit the operators to close down notwithstanding 30,000 men will be thrown out of work. They say the operators are bound to accept the terms of the miners and that to permit another course would indicate a weakening of which the operators would seek an advantage in adjusting other difficulties.

Trustees Hope Actual Work Will Be Begun This Summer.

Canton, Ohio, March 28.—If the plans of the McKinley National Memorial Association trustees do not miscarry actual work on the site and monument to McKinley on Monument Hill will be commenced late in the summer of 1904. Secretary Hartzell says it has been decided by the trustees not to wait longer for endorsement subscriptions. A meeting of the trustees will be held in New York soon when the report of the committee on designs will be heard, and it is hoped by the trustees that a design can be selected.

RIVER ON FIRE.

Pipe Line Bursts Beneath Bed of Stream at Liverpool, O.

Berea, Ohio, March 28.—Grimed and smoke-stained, hundreds of men from this city and the town of West, above here, are fighting the flaming Rocky river. In the hope of saving their homes. The bursting of the twelve-inch pipe line of the Standard Oil Company beneath the river bed at Liverpool, fifteen miles south, allowed the petroleum to escape in a spurting stream. In some manner it became ignited at Columbia Center, a village three miles below. Sunday night the country for several miles around was illumined by the flames which mounted to a height of fifteen feet.

When the break was discovered couriers on fast horses were dispatched to alarm the farmers and the inhabitants of the small towns on the banks of the stream. Behind these horsemen raced a flood of fire on the surface of the stream, each minute spreading and growing fiercer. Villagers and townsmen have joined with the farmers in a desperate struggle to stem the fiery tide, but this morning the situation is desperate. Construction of a dam near West View is being attempted.

Town Wars on Flood.

Niles, Mich., March 28.—With the two dams at Three Rivers and Colon swept away by the flood that is surging down the St. Joseph River, practically the entire male population of Niles worked until late Sunday night in a desperate effort to prevent the dam here from being washed out. By means of fire bells and couriers who rode from house to house, summoning the men, a small army was procured to fight the flood. Sand bags and heavy boulders were thrown into gaps in the banks of the river, and heavy anchors were placed at the dam to strengthen it. The water is ten feet above the normal level and rising rapidly.

Indiana Under Water.

Indianapolis, March 28.—Indiana practically is helpless in the grip of the flood. This city is almost without water supply or fire protection, owing to the flooding of the city water works, and the militia were ordered out to relieve the exhausted policemen and firemen. Thousands of acres of rich farming land are inundated by the breaking of levees on the Wabash and White rivers.

In Other Places.

Bay City, Mich., March 28.—The water has risen beyond all records and the southern part of the city is flooded.

Saginaw, Mich., March 28.—Suffering as a result of the floods is great, and there is no change for the better. It is rumored that two entire families have been drowned near Zilwaukee, a suburb.

Oaktown, Ind., March 28.—Levee along the Wabash River gives way and thousands of acres of land are inundated.

Bluffton, Ind., March 28.—The Wabash River is raging, and fears are expressed that the reservoir at Cellina will give way.

Edinburg, Ind., March 28.—The Indianapolis, Columbus and Southern Railway bridge has fallen and Blue River is rising. Property loss is heavy.

Brownstown, Ind., March 28.—Thousands of acres of farm land are flooded by breaking of levees on White River. Several feared to have lost their lives.

Marion, Ind., March 28.—Teddy McGovern, Robert Howe and William Carter were drowned in the flood while trying to rescue the family of James Martin. Willis Carter, another of the party, is lying of exposure.

Evansville, Ind., March 28.—The Ohio River is rising alarmingly, and already is above the danger mark. Farmers have moved their stock to the hills along the rivers in the southern part of the state.

Anthracite States.

Pennsylvania, Colorado and New Mexico are the only states that produce anthracite. Pennsylvania, however, produces practically all of the anthracite of the total production of 41,000,000 tons in 1902. Colorado and New Mexico produced less than 95,000 tons. In the production of bituminous coal Pennsylvania also leads, producing 40 per cent of the total for the United States in 1902. Illinois ranks second, Ohio third, West Virginia fourth and Alabama fifth.

Prizes for Servants.

A London employment agent, to encourage her clients to give satisfaction to their employers, says she will present a gold watch to any servant engaged from her agency who remains in the same situation five years; a silver watch to any girl who keeps her situation for two years and a brooch to those who have served in the same house for one year.

Platinum Finely Drawn.

Platinum has been drawn into wire so fine that, eighteen strands of it braided together could be drawn through the hollow of a human hair.

SERVICE PENSIONS.

Bureau is Flooded With Applications From Veterans Under New Ruling.

Washington, March 28.—Pension officials stand against at the number of inquiries flooding the bureau from veterans who intend to make application for service pensions under the recent order. The "great unknown army" is making itself heard from with a vengeance. Applications for pensions and inquiries how to proceed are being received at the rate of 1,000 a day. The number shows no sign of falling off, and is likely to increase rather than diminish. The applications are coming from every section of the United States. It was stated by an official that the estimate of Representative Miers that the order would increase pension payments $14,000,000 probably would be far below the mark. He said it appeared as if every old soldier and every old soldier's widow had become suddenly active.

Treaty Goes Over.

Washington, March 28.—Owing to the strong opposition in the foreign relations committee to the Cuban treaty which provides for turning over the Isle of Pines to the government of Cuba it has been decided by the committee to postpone action until the next session of Congress. The members of the committee now are contemplating a visit to the Isle of Pines for the purpose of looking over the field and seeing exactly what the island is like, whether it would be worth anything to the United States, and if this government would be justified in assuming sovereignty over the island in view of the fact that a large colony of American citizens has settled there and invested money in lands and farming industries, with the understanding that the sovereignty would remain with the United States.

Big Increase in Exports.

Washington, March 28.—Domestic manufactures exported in February, 1904, were greater in value than any preceding February and formed also a larger percentage of the total exports than in any preceding February. For the eight months ended with February the total manufactures also exceeded the total in the corresponding eight months of any earlier year. The fiscal year 1900 was the banner year in exports of manufactures from the United States, but from present indications the fiscal year 1904 will show an even larger total. The month of February shows a total of $38,000,000 worth of manufactures exported, against $37,000,000 in 1900, while for the eight months ending with February the total is $288,000,000, against $268,000,000 in the same months in 1900.

Did Not Draw Color Line.

Washington, March 28.—Some harsh criticism has been indulged in in certain quarters because Admiral Dewey, while in Santo Domingo waters recently, did not return the visit of the American minister, Mr. Powell, as demanded by etiquette and practice, it being charged that the reason was because the minister is a negro. Secretary of the Navy Moody has issued an official explanation declaring that all customary courtesies were extended Minister Powell, and that it was at the latter's own suggestion that Admiral Dewey did not go to the legation, because it was feared that in the frequent meetings between the insurgents and the government troops the admiral or some of his staff might be wounded.

Noted Telegrapher Is Dead.

Washington, March 28.—Harry L. Wilson, one of the most expert telegraphers in the country, died of pneumonia of the heart, aged 44 years. He leaves a widow and eight children.

Mr. Payne Grows Stronger.

Washington, March 28.—Postmaster General Payne rested very comfortably Sunday and sat up for some time. He is gradually getting stronger, but is not yet able to leave the city.

A Long-Maned Mare.

Mr. George O. Zillgitt of Inglewood, England, owns a carriage mare with a mane of silvery hair 18 feet in length at the tips. She is ten years old, and is the mother of a colt a few months old with mane and tail already reaching to the ground. Ordinarily the mane of the mother is kept braided and in a net.

Hairdressing a Labor.

Among the inventions in the old times for fixing the hair in position was advertised as follows: "A new method of stuccowing the hair in the most fashionable taste, to last with very little repair during the whole season of parliament. Price only 5 guineas. N. B.—He takes but one hour to build the head and two for baking it."

STILL SIXTEEN INCHES BELOW

THE HIGH WATER MARK OF THE YEAR 1881.

ROCK RIVER IS STILL RISING

Two Inches Difference Noted Between Noon and Three O'clock Yesterday—Higher Today.

Between Sunday noon and three o'clock in the afternoon the surface of Rock river above the Milwaukee street dam rose two inches. This morning it was a full inch higher and within a foot and a half of the high water mark of 1881. The river had reached the board box under the bridge that carries the water pipes and the current striking this obstacle was churning up great banks of foam. The pits in the Leffingwell bowling alleys were full and the water was beginning to run into the grooves alongside of the hardwood surfaces. In 1881 the water ran over the rests of the windows below the Rock County Bank and the measurements for comparison was made from these windows.

Dam At Watertown

A section of the big stone dam between the flour mills at Watertown, fifty feet long and one foot in depth was taken out Friday and it is feared that when the big ice jam above the city breaks up there may be serious trouble. The ice and high water carried away J. C. Seager's barber shop which was built over the stream. The river is said to have reached the high water mark of 1881.

At ten o'clock this morning the water was reported to be very high at Fort Atkinson and Jefferson and there was reported to be considerable ice in the river but it was believed that the dams would hold their own unless matters change for the worse.

HEARST BOOMERS MEET IN CREAM

City This Evening to Promote the Cause of the Yellow Kid for Presidency.

A meeting of the supporters of W. K. Hearst for the democratic nomination for president will be held in the Hotel Pflaer in Milwaukee this evening to form a Hearst league for the state of Wisconsin. It is expected that every congressional district in Wisconsin will be represented and that the attendance will be between 100 and 150. The fact that there are municipal campaigns in many of the cities of the state will interfere materially to reduce the attendance but a large number of prominent democrats have accepted invitations to be present and there is reason to believe that the meeting will be successful. Democratic conventions will be held for the nomination of city officers in Waukesha and Oconomowoc today with the attendance of representative democrats from those two cities in which Hearst movement is strong.

Curious Greek Law.

Among many curious laws concerning capital punishment, none perhaps is more curious than one which prevails in Greece. It enacts that a man, being sentenced to death, shall await his execution for two years. Thus for twenty-four miserable months he lives with that terrible vision of doom before his eyes.

Very Likely.

PIERCE FIGHTS WITH SNOW DRIFTS

Janesville Is Located in the Bariana Belt Compared With the Dakotas.

Janesville people who have complained of the cold weather of the past few weeks and the lateness of spring may be interested to learn that there are districts but a few hundred miles away that have suffered worse than Janesville. The following dispatch is dated St. Paul, March 27: The first transcontinental train to get through the snow blockade in North Dakota reached St. Paul over the Great Northern road at 10 o'clock today. Another train came in during the afternoon, and two more are expected to reach this city soon. The officials report that the line is again open and traffic has been resumed, although there is still some delay. No Northern Pacific coast train has yet reached St. Paul, and the road is still tied up west of Dickinson, N. D. Passengers on the delayed trains state that they were well cared for, and beyond the inconvenience of being tied up, there was no suffering. The trains were held at division points. Officials of the northern lines state that this has been one of the fiercest battles with snowdrifts they have ever experienced and that even the immense rotary plows which were sent against the drifts were almost powerless to cope with the huge mountains of ice and snow and that in many instances blowing had to be resorted to.

On Saturday night the Gazette printed the largest edition that any Janesville paper has ever attempted. SANBORN TALKS ABOUT LUSE

And His Present Chances for Election as Supreme Judge—Factional Fight.

"I note with pleasure the interest the general public is taking in the judicial contest," said A. L. Sanborn of Madison, Mr. Luse's committee has endeavored to place his claims for election before the people in a dignified, clean manner and to show them the importance of making a selection of a judicial candidate when they come to vote. In doing this Mr. Luse's friends and supporters also have endeavored to impress the fact that there was neither factionalism nor partisanship in his candidacy and that adherents of all parties were supporting him.

"Members of the bar generally have taken an active interest in his campaign, knowing that he is eminently qualified to discharge the duties of the position, and that he will make a strong and able judge. He has had a wide experience in the practice of his profession, and no word of criticism has ever been uttered against his honor or integrity. Without the factionalism opposition which his candidacy has engendered in Dane county, his old home, he would receive the unanimous vote of the county. The opposition is based purely upon factional grounds, and this constitutes the entire opposition of the state.

"The effort made to disparage the candidacy of Mr. Luse by charging that he is favorable to the interests of the corporations is on a par with the same charges made so frequently by the same sources during the last six or eight years, and made against practically every man in public life in Wisconsin who has not yielded perfect obedience to the desires of the men who do control the politics of the state and who now attempt to secure control of the judiciary.

The people have only to understand what this means and to awake to the consequences of the efforts put forth and the methods used to put their condemnation upon the men who are engineering the deal."

SWIFT RACE FOR THIEVES

WHO ROBBED VOLNEY ATWOOD'S CHICKEN COOP.

OCCURRED SATURDAY NIGHT

Chief Hogan, Officers Brown and Fanning Did Some Fast Running—Two Captured.

Chief Hogan, Officer Brown, and Officer Fanning joined in an exciting chase of chicken thieves Saturday evening. Word was received about nine o'clock that the coop in the rear of Volney Atwood's residence had been broken into, and two large windows shattered and a number of the fowls taken away. The police were soon on a still hunt for the raiders.

Men Were Intoxicated
On North Franklin street the police came upon several members of the gang with the chickens tucked under their arms. They at once took to their heels dropping all but one of the birds in the flight. Two of them were overhauled and captured but the third escaped. Officer Brown says that as he was reaching with his cane to whack the third fugitive who had turned into the alley back of McNamara's he stumbled and fell to the ground, his face coming into contact with a big cold of frozen earth. The chicken thieves were all intoxicated.

Walter O'Carry and Hugh Wagoner were the two men arrested. They were to have their hearing in municipal court this afternoon.

The electric power plant at Fulton was seriously hindered by the high water today and it may be necessary to close down and use the steam exclusively. The work of taking out the Leffingwell bowlings alleys commenced this afternoon.

THE

Moran of the Lady Letty

By
FRANK NORRIS.

Author of "The Octopus," "The Fit," Etc.

Copyright, 1895, by
S. S. McClure Company

"If it comes to that," returned Wilbur, surprised to see her thus easily downcast who was usually so indomitable—"If it comes to that, we can swim for it—a couple of planks!"

"Swim?" she echoed. "I'm not thinking of that. Of course we could swim."

"What then?"

"The sharks!"

Wilbur's teeth clicked sharply together. He could think of nothing to say.

As the water gained between decks the schooner's speed dwindled, and at the same time as she approached the shore the wind, shut off by the land, fell away. By this time the ocean was not four inches below the stern rail.

Two miles away was the nearest sand spit. Wilbur broke out a distress signal on the foremast in the hope that Charlie and the deserters might send off the dory to their assistance, but the deserters were nowhere in sight.

"What became of the junk?" he demanded suddenly of Moran. She motioned to the westward with her head.

"Still lying outside."

Twenty minutes passed. Once only Moran spoke.

"When she begins to go," she said, "she'll go with a rush. Jump pretty wide, or you'll get caught in the suction."

The two had given up all hope. Moran held grimly to the wheel as a mere matter of fact. Wilbur stood at her side, his clenched fists thrust into his pockets. The eyes of both were fixed on the yellow line of the distant beach. By and by Moran turned to him with an odd smile.

"We're a strange pair to die together," she said. Wilbur met her eyes an instant, but, finding no reply, put his chin in the air as though he would have told her she might well say that.

"A strange pair to die together," Moran repeated, "but we can do that better than we could have." She looked away from him—"could have lived together," she finished and smiled again.

"And yet," said Wilbur, "these last few weeks here on board the schooner we have been through a good deal together. I don't know," he went on humbly—"I don't know when I've been—when I've had—I've been happier than these last weeks. It is queer, isn't it? I know, of course, what you'll say. I've said it to myself often of late. I belong to the city and to my life there, and you—you belong to the ocean. I never knew a girl like you—never knew a girl could be like you. You don't know how extraordinary it all seems to me. You swear like a man, and you dress like a man, and I don't suppose you've ever been associated with other women, and you're strong—I know you are as strong as I am. You have no idea how different you are from the kind of girl I've known. Imagine my kind of girl standing up before Hoang and those cutthroat beachcombers with their knives and hatchets. Maybe it's because you are so unlike my kind of girl that—things are as they are with me. I don't know. It's a queer situation. A month or so ago I was at a ten in San Francisco, and now I'm aboard a shark fishing schooner sinking in Magdalena bay, and I'm with a girl that—that I—that I—well, I'm with you, and, well, you know how it is—I might as well say it—I love you more than I imagined I ever could love a girl."

Moran's frown came back to her forehead.

"I don't like that kind of talk," she said. "I am not used to it, and I don't know how to take it. Believe me," she said, with a half laugh, "it's all wasted. I never could love a man. I'm not made for men."

"No," said Wilbur, "nor for other women either."

"Nor for other women either."

Wilbur fell silent. In that instant he had a distinct vision of Moran's life and character, shunning men and shunning of women, a strange, lonely creature, solitary as the ocean whereon she lived; beautiful after her fashion; as yet without sex, proud, untamed, splendid in her savage, primal independence—a thing untouched and unutilized by civilization. She seemed to him some Bradamante, some mythical Brunehild, some Valkyrie of the legends born out of senescence, lost and unfamiliar in this end of the century time. Her purity was the purity of primeval glaciers. He could easily see how to such a girl the love of a man would appear only in the light of a humiliation—a degradation. And yet she could love, else how had he been able to love her? Wilbur found himself, even at that moment, wondering how the thing could be done—wondering to just what note the untouched cords would vibrate; just how she should be awakened one morning to find that she—Moran, sea rover, virgin unconquered, without law, without land, without sex—was, after all, a woman.

"Mate," she exclaimed of a sudden. "The barrels are keeping us up—the empty barrels in the hold. Hoi! We'll make land yet!"

It was true. The empty hogheads, destined for the storage of oil, had been forced up by the influx of the water to the roof of the hold and were acting as so many buoys. The schooner could sink no lower. An hour later, the quarter deck all awash, her bow thrown high into the air, listing horribly to starboard, the Bertha Millner took ground on the shore of Magdalena bay at about the turn of the tide.

Moran swung herself over the side, hip deep in the water, and, wading ashore with a line, made fast to the huge skull of a whale half buried in the sand at that point.

Wilbur followed. The schooner had grounded upon the southern horn of the bay and lay easily on a spit of sand. They could not examine the nature of the leak until low water the next morning.

"Well, here we are," said Moran, her thumbs in her belt. "What next? We may be here for two days; we may be here for two years. It all depends upon how bad a hole she has. Have we put in for repairs, or have we been east away? Can't tell till tomorrow morning. Meanwhile I'm hungry."

Half of the stores of the schooner were water soaked, but upon examination Wilbur found that enough remained intact to put them beyond all fear for the present.

"There's plenty of water up the creek," he said, "and we can snare all the quail we want, and then there's the fish and abalone. Even if the stores were gone we could make out very well."

The schooner's cabin was full of water, and Wilbur's hammock was gone, so the pair decided to camp on shore. In that torrid weather to sleep in the open air was a luxury.

In great good spirits the two sat down to their first meal on land. Moran cooked a supper that, barring the absence of coffee, was delicious. The whiskey was had from aboard, and they pledged each other, standing up, in something over two stiff fingers.

"Moran," said Wilbur, "you ought to have been born a man."

"At all events, mate," she said—"at all events, I'm not a girl."

"No," exclaimed Wilbur as he filled his pipe. "No, you're just Moran—Moran of the Lady Letty."

"And I'll stay that, too," she said decisively.

Never had an evening been more beautiful in Wilbur's eyes. There was not a breath of air. The stillness was so profound that the faint murmur of the blood behind the eardrums became an oppression. The ocean lifted toward the land with tiny rustling steps. The west was one gigantic stained window, the ocean floor a solid shimmer of opalescence. Behind them sullen purples marked the horizon, hooded with mountain crests, and after a long while the moon struggled a gleaming shoulder into view.

Wilbur, dressed in Chinese jeans and blouse, with Chinese wicker sandals on his bare feet, sat with his back against the whale's skull, smoking quietly. For a long time there was no conversation. Then at last:

"No," said Moran in a low voice. "This is the life I'm made for. In six years I've not spent three consecutive weeks on land. Now that Elliott"—she always spoke of her father by his first name—"now that Elliott is dead, I've not a tie, not a relative, not even a friend, and I don't wish it."

"But the loneliness of the life, the solitude," said Wilbur—"that's what I don't understand. Did it ever occur to you that the best happiness is the happiness that one shares?"

Moran clasped a knee in both hands and looked out to sea. She never wore a hat, and the red light of the afterglow was turning her eye lined hair to saffron.

"Hoi!" she exclaimed, her heavy voice pitched even lower than usual. "Who could understand or share any of my pleasures or be happy when I'm happy? And, besides, I'm happiest when I'm alone—I don't want any one."

"But," hesitated Wilbur, "one is not always alone. After all, you are a girl, and men, sailor men especially, are beasts when it's a question of a woman—an unprotected woman."

"I'm stronger than most men," said Moran simply. "If you, for instance, had been like some men I should have fought you. It wouldn't have been the first time," she added, smoothing one huge hand between her palms.

Wilbur looked at her with intent curiosity—noted again, as if for the first time, the rough, blue overalls thrust into the shoes; the coarse flannel shirt open at the throat, the belt with its stealth knife, her arms big and white and tattooed in sailor fashion, her thick, muscular neck; her red face, with its pale blue eyes and almost massive jaw, and her hair, her heavy, yellow, fragrant hair, that lay over her shoulder and breast, coiling and looping in her lap.

"No," he said, with a long breath, "I don't make it out. I knew you were out of my experience, but I begin to think now that you are out of even my imagination. You are right, you should keep to yourself. You should be alone—your mate isn't made yet. You are splendid, just as you are," while under his breath he added, his teeth clicking, "but I love you!"

It was growing late, the stars were all out, the moon riding high. Moran yawned.

"Mate, I think I'll turn in. We'll have to be at that schooner early in the morning, and I make no doubt she'll give us plenty to do," Wilbur hesitated to reply, waiting to take his cue from what next she should say.

"It's not enough to sleep where we are," she added, "without going aboard the Bertha, though we might have a couple of blankets off to lie on. This sand's as hard as a plank."

Without answering, Wilbur showed her a couple of blanket rolls he had brought off while he was unloading part of the stores that afternoon. They took one apiece and spread them on the sand by the bleached whale's skull. Moran pulled off her boots and stretched herself upon her blanket with absolute unconcern, her hands clasped under her head. Wilbur rolled up his coat for a pillow and settled himself for the night with an assumed self-possession. There was a long silence. Moran yawned again.

"I pulled the heel off my boot this morning," she said lazily, "and I've been limping all day."

"I noticed it," answered Wilbur. "Kitchell had a new pair aboard some-where, if they're not spoiled by the water now."

"Yes," she said indifferently. "We'll look them up in the morning." Again there was silence.

"I wonder," she began again, staring up into the dark. "If Charlie took that frying pan off with him when he went."

"I don't know. He probably did."

"It was the only thing we had to cook abalones in. Make me think to look into the galley tomorrow. This ground's as hard as nails, for all your blankets. Well, good night, mate. I'm going to sleep."

"Good night, Moran."

Three hours later Wilbur, who had not closed his eyes, sat up and looked at Moran, sleeping quietly, her head in a pale glory of hair—looked at her and then around him at the silent, deserted land.

"I don't know," he said to himself. "Am I a right minded man and a thoroughbred, or a misanthrope, or merely a prudent, sensible sort of chap that values his skin and bones? I'd be glad to put a name to myself." Then more earnestly he added, "Do I love her too much, or not enough, or love her the wrong way, or how?" He leaned toward her, so close that he could catch the savor of her breath and the smell of her neck, warm with sleep. The sleeve of the coarse blue shirt was drawn up, and it seemed to him as if her bare arm, hung out at full length, had some sweet aroma of its own. Wilbur drew softly back.

"No," he said to himself decisively; "no, I guess I am a thoroughbred after all." It was only then that he went to sleep.

When he awoke, the sea was pink with the sunrise, and one of the bay heads was all distorted and stratified by a mirage. It was hot already. Moran was sitting a few paces from him, braiding her hair.

"Hello, Moran!" he said, rousing up. "How long have you been up?"

"Since before sunrise," she said. "I've had a bath in the cove where the creek runs down. I saw a jack rabbit."

"Seen anything of Charlie and the others?"

"They've camped on the other side of the bay. But look yonder," she added. The junk had come in overnight and was about a mile and a half from shore.

"The deuce!" exclaimed Wilbur. "What are they after?"

"Fresh water, I guess," said Moran, knotting the end of a braid. "We'd better have breakfast in a hurry and turn to on the Bertha. The tide is going out fast."

While they breakfasted they kept an eye on the schooner, watching her sides and flanks as the water fell slowly away.

"Don't see anything very bad yet," said Wilbur.

"It's somewhere in her stern," remarked Moran.

In an hour's time the Bertha Millner was high and dry, and they could examine her at their leisure. It was Moran who found the leak.

"Bahaw!" she exclaimed, with a half laugh. "We can stick that up in half an hour."

A single plank had started away from the sternpost; that was all. Otherwise the schooner was as sound as the day she left San Francisco. Moran and Wilbur had the damage repaired by noon, nailing the plank to its place and calking the seams with lamp wick. Nor could their utmost careful search discover any further injury.

"We're ready to go," said Moran, "so soon as she'll float. We can dig away around the bows here, make fast a line to that rock out yonder and warp her off at next high tide. Hello! Who's this?"

It was Charlie. While the two had been at work he had come around the shore unobserved and now stood at some little distance, smiling at them calmly.

"Well, what do you want?" cried Moran angrily. "If you had your rights, my friend, you'd be keelhaunched."

"I tinkum velly hot day,"

"You didn't come here to say that. What do you want?"

"I come hab talkee-talk."

"We don't want to have any talkee-talk with such vermin as you. Get out!"

Charlie sat down on the beach and wiped his forehead.

"I come buy one piece bacon. China boy no hab got."

"We aren't selling bacon to deserters," cried Moran. "And I'll tell you this, you filthy little monkey: Mr. Wilbur and I are going home—back to Frisco—this afternoon, and we're going to leave you and the rest of your vipers to rot on this beach or to be murdered by beachcombers." And she pointed out toward the junk. Charlie did not even follow the direction of her gesture, and from this very indifference Wilbur guessed that it was precisely because of the beachcombers that the Machiavellian Chinaman had wished to treat with his old officers.

"No hab got bacon?" he queried, lifting his eyebrows in surprise.

"Plenty, but not for you."

Charlie took a huckskin bag from his blouse and counted out a handful of silver and gold.

"I buy um nist two piece tobacco."

"Look here," said Wilbur deliberately, "don't you try to flimflam us, Charlie. We know you too well. You don't want bacon and you don't want tobacco."

"China boy heap plenty much sick. Two boy velly sick. I tinkum die pretty soon tomorrow. You catchum ship chest; you gib me five, seven liver pill. Sish?"

"I'll tell you what you want," cried Moran, aiming a forefinger at him, pistol fashion. "You've got a blue funk because those Kail-gish beachcombers have come into the bay, and you're more frightened of them than you are of the schooner, and now you want us to take you home."

"How much?"

"A thousand dollars."

Wilbur looked at her in surprise. He had expected a refusal.

"You no hab got liver pill?" inquired Charlie blandly.

Moran turned her back on him. She and Wilbur conferred in a low voice.

"We'd better take them back if we decently can," said Moran. "The schooner is known of course in Frisco. She went out with Kitchell and a crew of coolies, and she comes back with you and I aboard, and if we tell the truth about it it will sound like a lie, and we'll have no end of trouble. Then, again, can just you and I work the Bertha into port? In these kind of airs it's plain work, but suppose we have dirty weather? I'm not so sure."

"I gib you ten dollar for ten liver pill," said Charlie.

"Will you give us $1,000 to set you down in San Francisco?"

Charlie rose. "I go back. I tell um China boy what you say 'bout liver pill. Blimey I come back."

"That means he'll take our offer back to his friends," said Wilbur in a low voice.

"I tink him want catchum schooner," voice. "You best hurry chop-chop," he called after Charlie. "We go home pretty soon."

"He knows very well we can't go away before high tide tomorrow," said Moran. "He'll take his time."

Later on in the afternoon Moran and Wilbur saw a small boat put off from the junk and make a landing by the creek. The beachcombers were taking on water. The boat made three trips before evening, but the beachcombers made no show of molesting the unfettered schooner or in any way interfering with Charlie's camp on the other side of the bay.

"No," exclaimed Moran between her teeth as she and Wilbur were cooking supper—"no; they don't need to. They've got about $150,000 of loot on board—our loot too. It goes against the grade."

The moon rose considerably earlier that night, and by 12 o'clock the bay was flooded with its electrical whiteness. Wilbur and Moran could plainly make out the junk tied up to the kelp offshore. They had slept but a short time when Wilbur was awakened by Moran shaking his arm.

"There's something wrong out there," she whispered—"something wrong with the junk. Hear 'em squealing? Look, look, look!" she cried of a sudden. "It's their turn now."

Wilbur could see the crank junk, with its staring red eyes, high stern and prow, as distinctly as though at noonday. As he watched, it seemed as if a great wave caught her suddenly under foot. She heaved up bodily out of the water, dropped again with a splash, rose again and again fell back into her own ripples, that, widening from her sides, broke crisply on the sand at Wilbur's feet.

Then the commotion ceased abruptly. The bay was quiet again. An hour passed, then two. The moon began to set. Moran and Wilbur, wearied of watching, had turned in again, when they were startled to wakefulness by the creak of onlookers and the sound of a boat grounding in the sand. The coolies, the deserters from the Bertha Millner, were there. Charlie came forward.

"Ge' lup! Ge' lup!" he said. "Junk all smash! Kail-gish come ashore. I tink him want catchum schooner."

Alaska a Profitable Investment.

We paid about two cents per acre for Alaska and have already taken out of her, in gold, fur, lumber and other natural products, forty cents an acre.

We Will Buy

A 50c. Bottle of Ligozone and Give it to You to Try.

Ligozone is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. It is the only way to end the cause of any germ disease. It is also a vitalizing tonic with which no other known product can compare. It is new in America, and millions who need it don't know of it. For that reason, we make this remarkable offer. We will buy the first bottle and give it to you if you need it. We will do this gladly to let the product itself show you what it can do.

We Paid $100,000

For the American rights to Ligozone—the highest price ever paid for similar rights on any scientific discovery. We did this after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, in this country and others. We paid it because Ligozone does what all the skill in the world cannot do without it. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Every physician knows that medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease.

Not Medicine.

Ligozone is the result of a process which, for more than 20 years, has been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research. Its virtues are derived solely from gas, made in large part from the best oxygen producers. By a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time, these gases are made part of the liquid product. The result is a product that does what oxygen does, and oxygen is the very source of vitality, the most essential element of life. The effects of Ligozone are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Ligozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetable matter. That is why Ligozone kills every disease germ, and with a product which to the human body is life.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Ligozone kills the germs, wherever they are, and the results are inevitable. By destroying the cause of the trouble, it invariably ends the disease, and forever.

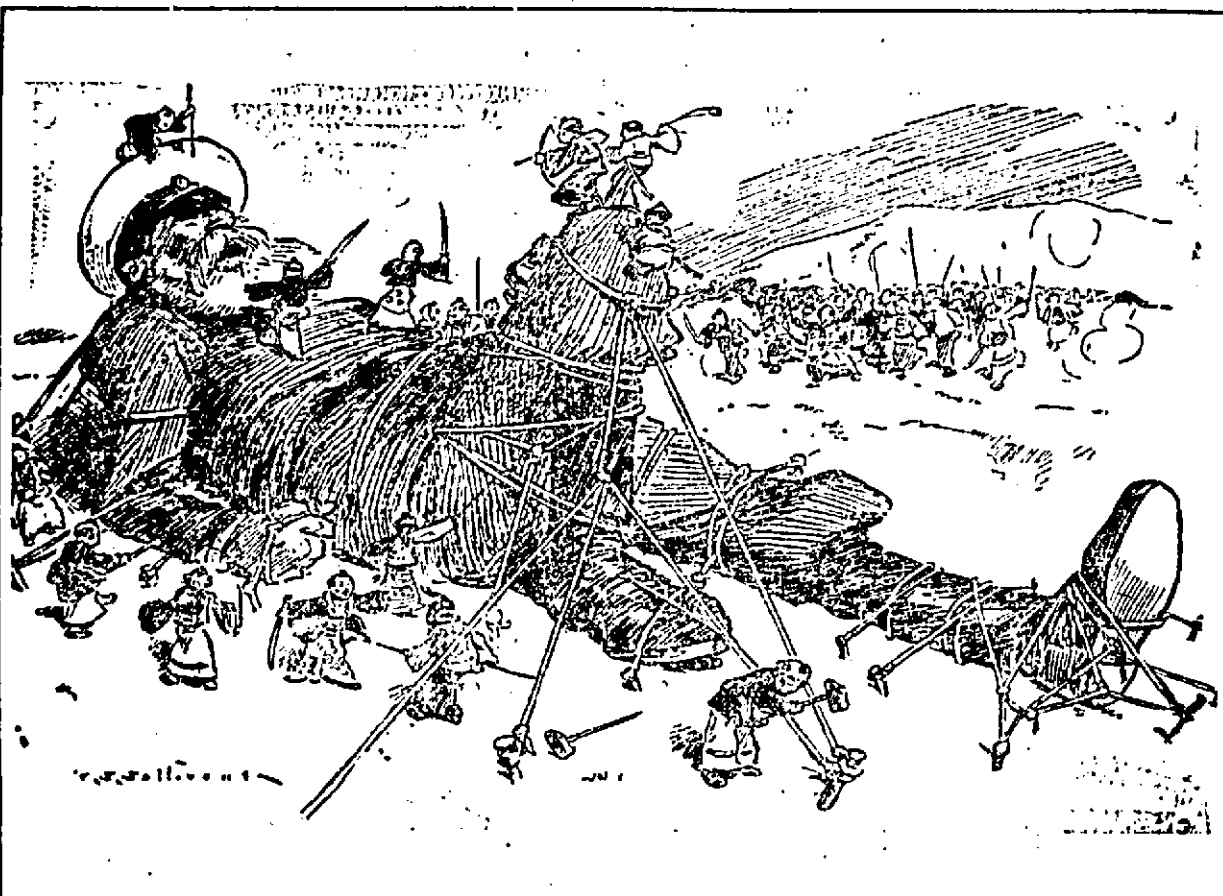

Any physician or hospital not yet using Ligozone will be gladly supplied for a test.

ITEMS OF VALUE FOR THE GROWERS

What is Accomplished by the Society Which Reaches Nearly Every Farm Community.

In 1853 a band of enthusiastic fruit growers met at Whitewater and organized the Wisconsin Fruit Growers' association. This society held successful annual exhibitions until 1862. In 1865 the association met and re-organized taking the name of the Wisconsin State Horticultural society. From that time until the present the society has held annual or semi-annual meetings, given exhibitions and through its members and printed reports preached the gospel of fruits and flowers.

Like other industries fruit growing in Wisconsin has had its ups and downs. The early reports of the W. F. G. A. show that these pioneers had planted all manner of fruits, even quinces. Later, in the early seventies, the fierce Wisconsin winters swept away all the tender fruits and discouragement fell on all but a few of the faithful. The stout-hearted ones said: "If we cannot grow the Pippin and the Bellefleur we will produce varieties that will grow," and they set about doing it. For twenty-five years members of the Wisconsin State Horticultural society have been trying into the secrets of nature and battling with the elements to find fruits fitted to Wisconsin conditions. The records of the work done by the members of the society may be found in every part of the state.

The records of the society are also written for all time in gold, silver and bronze, for at all great exhibitions, including Chicago in 1893, Wisconsin fruit has won medals and unbounded admiration. This is a little of the past history of the society. At another time it is hoped to tell something of the present work, of the four trial orchards established by the society in northern Wisconsin, carrying fruit growing up to the shores of Lake Superior. A host of younger men and women are now rallying to carry on the work and share in the benefits, but their number is too small. The membership roll of our society should number thousands instead of hundreds. Every man who has an acre of ground, every woman who wants vegetables, fruits and flowers should be a member of the society. Every one who reads this is cordially invited to become a member. It costs one dollar a year unless you are already a member of a local society, when fifty cents will be enough. The annual report and bulletins are sent free to members. A bulletin on the planting of trees and shrubs is now in press.

MAJOR RATHBONE ASKS JUSTICE OF CONGRESS

Former Postal Official Requests Review of Case in Which He Was Convicted of Cuban Frauds.

Washington, March 28.—Senator Platt of Connecticut, chairman of the senate committee on relations with Cuba, has received from Maj. E. G. Rathbone an appeal for a review of his case by congress. He calls attention to the investigation of the protests against the confirmation of Gen. Leonard Wood had recently by the senate committee on military affairs. Maj. Rathbone has on file with Senator Platt's committee a request for an investigation of the circumstances under which he was convicted of complicity in the Cuban postal frauds, but no action ever has been taken in the matter. Maj. Rathbone's interest in the fight made recently against Gen. Wood was because of his belief that Gen. Wood used undue influence in bringing about his (Rathbone's) conviction. It is asserted also that the late Senator Hanna's interest in the case was due to his belief that Maj. Rathbone was dealt with unjustly.

Maj. Rathbone uses in his appeal to congress all the comment concerning his case which was made by Senator Hanna in his brief regarding the Wood case, which was offered in executive session and is now a confidential document of the senate. Maj. Rathbone bases his claim for an investigation upon his "right to be heard as an American citizen."

PASTOR CAUSES CHURCH RIOT Renounces Pulpit and Bible and Service Ends in Fight.

Cleveland, March 28.—The morning service of the Franklin Avenue Congregational church, one of the most fashionable churches of the West End, ended in a riot over the views of the pastor, Rev. Dr. G. A. Fisher. Dr. Fisher announced that he had determined to quit the ministry. The total acceptance of the Bible, he said, was absurd. As he attempted to explain his position one faction of the church attempted to throw him out of the pulpit. Another faction declared that he should be allowed to continue. Words led to blows among the male members of the congregation, which, with the screams of the women, brought the service to an end.

Boston, Mass., March 28.—The newspaper advertising agency of Pettingill & Co. has announced that it has placed its affairs in the hands of its creditors. Counsel representing Pettingill & Co. stated that the liabilities may reach $1,000,000, with assets possibly one-quarter of that amount.

No papers of formal assignment have been filed, and it is yet to be determined whether the corporation will proceed to the bankruptcy courts or undertake an adjustment through a friendly receiver.
